Dear Hiring Committee,

I am applying for the position of full-time Speech Language Pathologist at Cora Services. After nearly four years of working as a professional speech-language pathologist in New York, I gave birth to my first child this past November. My family and I then decided to relocate to Pennsylvania to be closer to family. Now that we are settled, I am eager to continue my career.

My interest in the position at Cora Services stems from my passion for working with children. In my role as speech-language pathologist at League School and Day Treatment Center, I provided therapy for students ages 5-21 with a range of developmental and psychiatric disorders. Many of my students at League struggled with emotional and behavioral disturbances. The experience taught me countless strategies to address goals and improve communication despite the presence of challenging behaviors. It was extremely rewarding when I could find one piece of the puzzle and determine what motivated a student. The other pieces of the puzzle were held by my colleagues. I loved being part of an interdisciplinary team and working together to help our students succeed.

The enclosed resume details my experiences in the field, illustrating my willingness to work hard, adapt, and push myself further. I have a strong professional background in social-communication disorders, articulation and phonology, fluency, and language disorders.

I am confident that I have the initiative, knowledge, and interpersonal skills to be a positive contribution to the team at Cora Services. I would be honored to have the opportunity to interview for this position.
