To Whom It May Concern:

I had the opportunity of supervising Taylor Hunt in her Speech Language Pathology Graduate clinical development experiences at Bloomsburg University of Pennsylvania. Taylor completed her Fall 2017 semester of Clinic at Southern Columbia School District under my supervision.

Taylor was responsible for a caseload ranging from elementary to high school age students. She gained valuable experiences in focus areas including: mild to severe expressive and receptive language disorders, Augmentative and Alternative communication, social pragmatics, Down syndrome, articulation, functional life skills, group therapy and individual therapy.

Taylor participated in the screenings and evaluation/assessment procedures to determine eligibility for services. She learned about the Individualized Education Plan (IEP) writing process and participated in meetings to discuss present levels and goals. Other school based areas of focus for Taylor while at Southern Columbia School District included: goal development, progress reports, data collection, group and individual lesson planning, and implementation skills. She designed age appropriate activities to target goals for multiple students and various speech and language development skills.

Taylor exceeded expectations in all competency areas and demonstrated commitment and dedication to the academic growth of her student on caseload along with her own educational development. She demonstrated the ability to work independently and as a team member, often co-treating with peer clinicians with more complex students in groups.

Taylor developed professional interpersonal skills with her clients, families and co-workers. She displayed accountability and credibility when completing tasks. Her clinical experience here at Bloomsburg University and Southern Columbia School District, I feel, has prepared her to be successful in a position in the field of Speech/Language Pathology.

I highly recommend Taylor for a Speech Language Pathologist position in your district. She will be an asset to your team of educating professionals and bring her own personality and creative drive to the department to best meet her student's needs.
