Cannabis Culture

October 3, 2018 - 9:00 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

CORA Conference Center

Presenter: David Fialko, B.S., is an Internationally Certified Prevention Specialist as a well as a Certified Tobacco Treatment Specialist who works for The Council of Southeast PA, Inc., where he has worked for the past 9 years. David's passion is encouraging and assisting people & communities to attain health, well-being and happiness while overcoming adversities such as substance misuse/abuse or mental health disorders. He has over 16 years experience working in the Mental Health & Drug and Alcohol fields as an adventure based counselor, educator, intensive outpatient counselor, tobacco treatment specialist, commissioned FDA officer and prevention specialist. David speaks regularly throughout Pennsylvania and New Jersey on topics related to health and substance use/abuse.

Purpose: A look at current potency of types of cannabis products, their potential for misuse/abuse/addiction, and how the current legal status could affect usage rates across the ages. Ways to use cannabis will be explored and correlate how different methods of consumption can relate to potential of dependency and effect the adolescent population from a prevention viewpoint. Medical cannabis and its CBD counterparts will be explored from a health perspective. Will explore why majority of US citizens view cannabis with a lower perceived level of harm than that of alcohol. Discussions regarding current legal status will provide participants with a better understanding of laws and how they vary from state to state. Potency of today's cannabis will be explored in detail, which will allow participants to better understand the addiction potential of today's cannabis.

Cost of Program - $80.00

Objectives: As a result of this interactive workshop, participants will be able to demonstrate:

- A clearer understanding of the current types of cannabis products (both legal and illegal) that are readily available and easily accessible by all ages.
- An increase in understanding of how cannabis abuse effects the developing brain and can potentially impact ones overall physical health and mental well-being.
- An increase in understanding of the various administration routes and the varying euphoric effects that these routes provide.
