RE: [Prevention Education Specialist]

To Whom It May Concern,

It is with great interest I am writing in regard to the prevention specialist position. As my resume indicates, I possess more than several years of trained experience working with children and adolescents. I am an energetic hard worker, who is highly motivated to work in a fast paced environment. I have a passion for working with students and creating environments where they can grow and learn. I believe my responsibilities from my previous positions and my educational experience would make me a great candidate for this position.

My school counseling internships allowed me to work with and understand students from all backgrounds. As a varsity assistant field hockey coach I have learned how to help students achieve success inside and outside of school. Working as a paraprofessional, I gained further insight into the needs of students with Autism. As an accounts receivable representative I further developed my attention to detail, my problem solving strategies and my understanding of individual's needs. As a teacher's assistant and camp counselor, my responsibilities included working as a team member, implementing educational lessons, and managing all the children's needs. My supervisors have always relied on my ability to communicate efficiently, be flexible in a consistently changing environment and my ability to become a leader when needed.

Sincerely,

Sarah Yacucci
