

To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is being written in support of Veronica Robbins. Veronica has been a student of mine in the Temple School Psychology program.

Veronica is my advisee and from the start of her time in our EdS program, she demonstrated enthusiasm and openness to learning. She presented as someone passionate about helping others and advocating for students and families. Veronica is also someone who is extremely conscientious, resourceful, and a quick learner. This combined with her passion and commitment to children makes her an ideal graduate student and future intern.

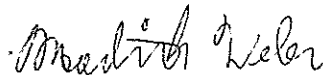

Last year Veronica and her cohort were the first cohort in our program to participate in a revised practicum format where we partnered with a local non-profit to help with academic and social skills interventions in local schools. Since this was a new practicum, there were many times where they were asked to go a classroom in a school and were very much left to their own devices once there! This required a great deal of flexibility and resourcefulness on their part, and Veronica was able to thrive! The teacher she worked with had excellent things to say about her.

Veronica responds well to supervision and is professional and engaged in all the endeavors that I have seen her undertake. I have also witnessed Veronica manage some extremely challenging situations with grace, and incredible resilience and strength. Veronica is both extremely intelligent and hardworking, and as a result has excellent grades! She is mature and always handles herself very professionally and ethically. She also has excellent time management skills.

Our school psychology program is a small one, and as such, the faculty has many interactions with the students in and out of class. Veronica is always on the list of people who are willing to help volunteer when asked for a program-wide event. I have gotten to know Veronica as a warm and caring person who is well regarded by peers and faculty alike.

Overall, I highly recommend Veronica. Her warmth, enthusiasm, caring, and respect for the people with whom she works serve her well in all of her clinical endeavors. Veronica's skills, training, professionalism, intellectual curiosity, personal characteristics and inner strength will make her an asset to any organization or agency in which she works.

Yours truly
