To whom it may concern at CORA Services:

I am eagerly writing to apply for the Prevention Education Specialist at CORA Services.

The role is very appealing to me, and I believe that my strong experience makes me a highly competitive candidate for this position. My key strengths - based on my experience with City Year and my previous job background - that would support my success in this position include:

- I have experience partnering with teachers and school staff to support children and young adults academically, socially, and emotionally, both individually and in larger group and classroom settings.
- I possess exceptional intervention lesson planning skills – based on qualitative observations and student data – in social-emotional learning and academics.
- I provide excellent organizational, interpersonal, problem-solving, and critical thinking qualities in my work with children and young adults, and in my partnerships with coworkers.

Students First, Collaboration Always – one of the City Year Core Values – is what I keep at the forefront of my day to day. To equitably support each individual child and young adult with rigor and passion, leadership must remember that working and learning together ultimately produces the best results. For two years, I have embodied this value and am confident that I will continue to do so as a Prevention Education Specialist with CORA Services.

Please see my resume for additional information on my background.

I can be reached anytime via email at laura_johnson2015@aol.com or by cell at 610-698-5515.
